Backache

In spite of the best care one takes of oneself, any part of the human machine is liable to become out of order. The most important organs are the stomach, heart and kidneys.

The kidneys are the scavengers and they work day and night in separating the poisons from the blood. Their signals of distress are easily recognized and include such symptoms as backache, depression, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic twinges, droopy, gout.

"The very best way to restore the kidneys to their normal state of health," says Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "is to drink plenty of pure water and obtain from your favorite pharmacy a small amount of Anuric, which is dispensed by almost every druggist. Anuric is inexpensive and should be taken before meals. You will find Anuric more potent than lithia, dissolves uric acid as water does sugar."

ENGINEERS ARE NEEDED

Premier of Russia Asks for Experts, Mechanical and Administrative

WAR MATERIALS INDISPENSABLE

America's Brains Needed for the Work of Reorganization

Petrograd (via London), April 12.—"Russia to-day needs administrative, mechanical and engineering experts to assist in the vast work of reorganizing the muddle created by the old autocratic regime. We need war materials, especially railway rolling stock in big quantities. We do not need fighting men, because we have millions in reserve."

Such was the reply of Prince Lvoff, the Russian premier, when I asked his excellency yesterday what precise form American aid to Russia should assume during the war. Prince Lvoff, who appeared highly elated that America in intervention had come at a moment when the provisional government is facing almost superhuman tasks, frankly stated his opinion that American assistance, if offered, would be best directed toward dispatching technical equipment for lines of communication, under the personal supervision of American engineers.

"While news of the probable departure of American troops for France created intense enthusiasm throughout Russia, I believe that the most significant aspect of American intervention, so far as Russia is concerned, is not actual military, but technical co-operation," said the premier. "We have inexhaustible human resources. You have expert directors and splendidly equipped factories to help us sustain our immense armies at their highest possible fighting efficiency. It is not men that Russia needs, but the means of keeping her armies at the front and in proper fighting trim, under efficient transport managers. We need railroad locomotives, cars and tracks, for example, as much as ammunition. We need railroad experts to deliver ammunition promptly at required points as much as we do artillery."

"We need American equipment under the direction of quick, American methods."

Prince Lvoff also stated that the northern wheat-growing province, which refused footstuffs to the old regime, are now freely offering their entire wheat supplies to the new government to relieve the prevailing bread shortage in Petrograd and other towns.

"The provisional government, which has already passed through a difficult fortnight, now feels that all Russia is firmly supporting our temporary regime," said the premier. "We believed in the Russian people's solidarity, and now American intervention suddenly revealed to the Russian population that they form an important part in the world's democracy, which is fighting to smash the last remaining vestige of imperialism."
